

Yadira joined MIT in September 2018. She received her BS from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and was a Master's candidate in Mindfulness Studies at Lesley University. Prior to joining MIT, Yadira worked at the David Rockefeller Center for Latin American Studies at Harvard University for fourteen years in student programming and services. She worked closely with the Center's Cuban Studies Program and Puerto Rico Winter Institute where she traveled with students and organized programmatic activities. In addition, she oversaw the Center's Certificate in Latin American Studies, Graduate Student Associates and various grants, thesis prizes and fellowships.

In her spare time Yadira loves to travel and manages a joint blog she has with her twin sister. Her goal is to visit all 50 states and each continent.

She is trilingual English/Spanish/Spanglish.
